FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

The CASPCA is seeking loving homes for more than 30 dogs

With recent frigid temperatures across Central Virginia, the Charlottesville-Albemarle SPCA has seen an increase in the number of dogs needing help. While temperatures slowly begin to rise, requests for assistance have not slowed down, and the shelter has run out of kennel space. In order for the CASPCA to continue bringing in those pets that desperately need shelter, love and care, they must first find loving homes for the animals already at the shelter. Through Sunday, adoption fees for dogs will be 50% off.

If you are interested in helping an animal at the Charlottesville-Albemarle SPCA but are unable to adopt, please consider becoming a foster. Every animal that finds a loving home, opens up space for another animal needing help.

“We are so grateful to be a part of a community that continues to open their hearts for the abandoned, neglected, and homeless animals in our community. With our limited kennel spaces, we are in need of families to open their hearts and adopt,” says Angie Gunter, Executive Director of the CASPCA.

About the Charlottesville-Albemarle SPCA: The Charlottesville-Albemarle SPCA is proud to have maintained the City of Charlottesville and Albemarle County as a No Kill community, providing lifesaving care to thousands of animals in the region. The mission of the CASPCA is to advance the compassionate treatment of animals by providing sheltering, medical care and behavioral services for dogs and cats; promoting permanent, caring homes; and furthering education and outreach to place healthy animals in caring homes.
